'Small but Mighty' - Living with Rheumatoid Arthritis

Sheena Thomson was diagnosed with Polyarticular Rheumatoid Arthritis after a bout of Rheumatic Fever when she was two years old. Every joint in her body was affected and since then she has had three major surgeries, numerous cortisone shots in her joints, and too-many-to-count physical problems to overcome as she went about building her life. "I have rheumatoid arthritis, it's part of my life, but it's not my life".

Sheena's gratitude for her parents shines all through her conversation. "I came out of my shell because I was allowed to. My parents never coddled me, never patronized me. They knew I would ask for help if I needed it." And there were many times when she did need it, especially through all the visits to the IWK. Here Sheena breaks off to praise the specialists who treated her for several years. "They were wonderful. They understood me and what it was like for a kid to be so different. The doctors helped me realize I could get on with my life".

All these influences must have worked, because if ever there was a better example of how determination can help to overcome adversity, look no further than the petite young woman who is Sheena Thomson. She passed all her grades at Westisle High School, graduating with the students she had started school with in Grade 1. She never missed a major event at school, insisting that any medical treatment could "only happen before or after".

She graduated from UPEI with a Major in Sociology and Anthropology and a Minor in Women's Studies ("Which I loved!") Sheena developed her writing and research skills while at UPEI, and worked in several research positions, including a short contract at the PEI Council of People with Disabilities. But Sheena wanted a career, so decided to go back to school to gain a Child and Youth Care Worker qualification.

She succeeded, in true Sheena fashion, and is now the Supervisor of 27 children in an after-school program—happy with her achievements. With an apartment, a happy personal life, and the start of a career, nothing will stop her now.

Sheena need look no further than her mirror to determine who is responsible for her success so far. She is a powerful force and a reminder of how high we can reach.

GOIN' FISHIN'

Some excellent news for fishing enthusiasts. The Morell River Management Co-op wants to welcome wheelchair users to Anderson's Pool, where avid fishers can relax on the fishing platform for as long as they wish as they anticipate their next perfect catch. Work was carried out in 2010 to extend the wheelchair accessible area of this excellent facility. The fishing platform is easily reached from the parking area. Just cross the bridge, turn onto the trail for a short distance and the platform is there. The trail has been extended for half a kilometre so that it is now possible to travel down it by wheelchair through the woods and along the stream once the day's fishing quota is safely 'in the bag'. The trail is accessible subject to the weather conditions. If you want more information please call Roddy Milton, the Co-ordinator of the Morell River Management Co-op. He will be happy to answer your questions, and give directions. His phone number is 739-2004. Email: mooneyspond@bellaliant.com

Charlottetown Area Transit - Accessibility for All - In Time

According to recent news reports of the study commissioned by the City of Charlottetown to develop a Strategic Plan for Charlottetown Area Transit by Dillon Consulting Limited, there are some key subjects raised that will impact people with disabilities.

- The goal to provide a fully accessible public bus system should be a key priority for Charlottetown Area Transit.
- (NOTE: The term 'accessibility' now includes an aging population, families with strollers, tourists, and newcomers as well as persons with disabilities.)
- Designated routes to be 100% accessible at all times. For example, University Avenue.
 - To encourage more winter ridership, Public Works to clear snow build-up away from bus stops so that persons with disabilities can actually get into a fully accessible vehicle, and
 - Curbs and sidewalks to be rebuilt at bus stops to allow for accessibility.

Such changes would have to be phased in over several years before the Transit system could be described as 'fully accessible'. New budgets would have to be approved, and political will would have to be demonstrated that the changes would be made. The proposed changes would mean that the Transit System would be closer to providing a truly public service.
